

HUMEIRA IQTIDAR

Research Fellow
Centre for South Asian Studies and King's College
University of Cambridge

Humeira Iqtidar is currently a research fellow at the Centre of South Asian Studies and at King's College, Cambridge University. She has an MBA from McGill University and a doctorate from the University of Cambridge. She has worked as a management consultant in Canada and UK, and has taught at LUMS, and Punjab University in Pakistan. At Cambridge University she teaching covers courses on religion and politics, South Asian politics, and globalization. Her research is concerned with interrogating theories of secularization and secularism through a focus on contemporary Muslim politics. She is one of the conveners of the AHRC/British Academy funded academic network, The Secularism Network, as well as of the Cambridge based Religion, Ethnicity and Identity network.

Her most recent publications include:

"Colonial Secularism and the Genesis of Islamism in North India" in Gareth Stedman-Jones and Ira Katznelson eds., Religion and the Political Imagination (Cambridge, forthcoming 2009).

"Muslim Cosmopolitanism: Contemporary Practice and Social Theory" in Bryan Turner ed., Handbook of Globalization (Taylor & Francis, forthcoming 2009).

"Terrorism and Islamism: Differences, Dynamics and Dilemmas" in special issue on 'Terrorism, Security and Business', Global Business and Economic Review, 10/2, 2008.

"Jama'at-e-Islami Pakistan: Learning from The Left" in Naveeda Khan and Veena Das eds., Crisis and Beyond: Pakistan in the 20th Century (Routledge, 2008).